By Senior Airman Troy Hawkes
355th Wing Public Affairs

Many Davis-Monthan Air Force Base team members are helping to educate and discipline local school-aged children as part of the volunteer program, Operation: Leadership Boot-Camp.

LBC is a basic training type environment that military members utilize to teach middle school children the basic values that servicemembers learn during basic training.

The program focuses on teaching middle school (6th to 8th grade) children five core values:

Air Force approves new 15-month enlistment for incoming first-term airmen so Americans can serve

By Capt. Chrissy Cuttita
355th Wing Public Affairs

Congressional approval of a national call to service enlistment option, to begin Oct. 1, as a part of the fiscal 2003 National Defense Authorization Act, has people discussing the meaning of military service.

The program allows the military services a new option to reach a group of young Americans who otherwise might not serve because of the length of traditional enlistment options, said Bob Clark, assistant director in the Department of Defense's accession policy directorate.

"We personify service," said Senior Master Sgt. Lionel McFarlane, 355th Wing career assistance advisor.

"Any capacity someone has to serve we should applaud it," he added.

Under the new program, which is aimed at expanding the opportunities for all Americans to serve the country, a recruit enlists and incurs a 15-month active-duty service obligation following completion of initial-entry training.

Gym lockers

Comment: With the new fitness center now open, is it possible for retirees or other gym patrons to rent a locker at the Haeffner Fitness Center? The vast majority of gym patrons now use the new facility. At least 75 percent of the lockers in the Haeffner are "daily use" designated but with the reduced usage of this facility, most of the lockers are never used.

Response: Thank you for your inquiry regarding the locker rental program at the Haeffner Fitness Center.

Currently, 64 percent of our lockers are designated as "rental" and only 36 percent are designated as daily use. This is consistent with the standards established in Air Force Instruction 34-266, Air Force Fitness and Sports Programs.

The waiting period for full lockers is currently more than one year, so we don't foresee any changes to eligibility for these lockers in the near future. However, we currently don't have a waiting list for half lockers and have a reasonable amount of these lockers available for rental.

We will recommend changing the local policy to open up eligibility for half lockers to active-duty family members, retirees, their family members and authorized civilian employees. We will publish all changes to the local policy once approved. If you have any further questions or concerns about the fitness center, please contact Robert Gibson, fitness center director, at 228-0019.

House spraying

Comment: I have been calling the housing office to get our house sprayed. We have a nest of brown recluse spiders. They said since our house has already been sprayed once, it cannot be sprayed again for another month. I have a 4-month-old daughter. They didn't even spray the alleys.

Response: I apologize for the run around and the incorrect information you received. The housing office and housing maintenance personnel were briefed on proper procedures to follow when a call is received concerning spiders. Housing maintenance is required to respond immediately on work orders concerning brown recluse and black widow spiders. They are correct in that after the unit is sprayed there is a month's wait before the unit is sprayed again. This allows the spiders to die and/or carry the poison back to their nest. An environment-friendly alternative to spraying is using a broom or vacuum to kill or bag the spiders. If you use a vacuum, immediately dispose of the bag to prevent the spiders from escaping. If you have any other questions, contact Ruby Modica, housing manager, at 228-4264 or Yvonne Brabham, facilities element chief, at 228-6609.

Volunteer office opens to assist D-M members with 2002 tax filings

Capt. Jason Robertson
355th Wing Legal Office

Free income tax assistance, preparation and electronic filing became available from the base Volunteer Income Tax Assistance Office Wednesday and will continue through Tuesday, April 15th. This year, the first two weeks of tax assistance will be reserved for active-duty members and their spouses.

Appointments are required and can be made Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at 228-3489. Office hours are 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., Mondays through Fridays. The VITA office is located on Madera Street in Building 4310, Room 109.

Taxpayers should bring the following items when visiting the VITA office for tax preparation: Social Security card or record of Social Security number; names and birth dates of taxpayer, spouse and dependents; the federal (and state, if applicable) tax package the individual received in the mail; Forms W-2, 1099-R and other statements of reportable income such as Form SSA-1099 (Social Security benefits); all appropriate expense information (medical, home mortgage interest, real estate taxes, charitable contributions, child care expenses), information on rental property and investment sales; applicable powers of attorney; and a copy of the 2001 federal (and state) tax return. For direct deposit of refunds a blank check or proof of bank routing number and account number is required.

To use the electronic filing system for a joint return, both spouses must be present to sign the Internal Revenue Service declaration form before the return can be transmitted to the IRS. If they wish to mail the return, only one person need be present since the forms can be taken home for both to sign.

Taxpayers may get direct deposit refunds by filing their 2002 returns either electronically or using paper forms. The electronic filing system permits direct deposit to a taxpayer's bank account and the deposit is normally made within two weeks. Mailed returns generally take longer to receive. The electronic filing system also allows taxpayers who owe the government to "file now and pay later." Experts encourage these people to file during February and March, and then they can pay anytime before April 15th.

The VITA office will have a limited supply of federal and Arizona tax forms and instructions. Individuals requiring forms from any other state should contact that state to get the appropriate forms. Most federal and state forms are now available on the Internet. IRS forms and publications may also be ordered directly from the IRS by calling 1-800-TAX-FORMS (829-3676). For more information, call the VITA office at 228-3489.

Airmen can file taxes online for free

The Treasury Department, Office of Management and Budget and the Internal Revenue Service in Washington launched a new Web site Jan. 17 featuring private-sector partners who will allow eligible taxpayers to prepare and file their taxes online for free.

"No one likes paying taxes," said Kenneth Dam, acting treasury secretary. "It's too confusing and time consuming. The launch of this new Web site is great news for millions of Americans."

D-M members honor Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s life, celebrate

By Tech. Sgt. Ruby Zarzyczny
305th Rescue Squadron

"What a man, what a man, what a mighty, mighty good man," said Chaplain (Capt.) David Martinez, 355th Wing chaplain, at Hope Chapel, as he introduced Chaplain Arthur Tigney, 305th Rescue Squadron Air Force Reserve Command chaplain and guest speaker at the Jan. 15 Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. celebration.

Tigney was chosen by the Davis-Monthan Air Force Base Black Heritage Association Committee to speak the word at Hope Chapel during an inspirational Gospel service honoring the life of another "mighty great man," Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Tigney, as he has done in the past, stepped up to the plate when the Gospel service needed him, said Master Sgt. Royce Morton, BHA committee member.

Morton says she can't take all the credit for getting Tigney to speak at the MLK celebration. He was also recommended by Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Scott Gardner, 355th Wing chaplain.

"Chaplain Tigney has been available every time we asked, be it to preach at a worship service or handle the prayer request line. He is an awesome speaker and a wonderful chaplain," said Gardner.

"I met him when he was activated last February. After meeting him and hearing our people sing his praises, I felt he would be a tremendous speaker for the MLK service and recommended him to Master Sergeant Morton. He is fantastic."

Tigney began his service by asking, "Is the generation following me still connected to the struggles of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.? How do we incorporate the struggles of the past with the struggles of today?"

Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s letter from the Birmingham, Ala., jail, which shared some of his struggles, is what Tigney referred to. King was criticized by the religious leaders of the community for his march against segregation and racial discrimination. He was called an extremist while he sat in a Birmingham jail for non-violently marching without a permit.

"The greatest stumbling blocks of freedom is not the White Citizen's Council or the Ku Klux Klanner, but the white moderate, who is more devoted to 'order' than to justice; who prefers a negative peace, which is the absence of tension, to a positive peace, which is the presence of justice ...," wrote King in his letter. "Shallow understanding from people of good will is more frustrating than absolute misunderstanding from people of ill will. Lukewarm acceptance is much more bewildering than outright rejection. We will have to repent in this generation not merely for the hateful words and actions of the bad people but for the appalling silence of the good people."

The lessons learned during the Civil Rights Movement are still valid for the generations that follow and can be applied to the current civil rights struggles within the world today.

"But how do we make the 'Isness the Oughtness of Life?' Through unconditional love," said Tigney. "Love your enemies, pray for those who hate you and curse you. Love is what will ultimately save the world and our civilization."

"Yes, it's hard to love our enemies," said Tigney. "How can we love our enemies? Analyze the you, and find the 'who-of-who' that we are. There are many things that find us unlovable for all kinds of reason. You can choose to diversify," said Tigney.

"Do you find yourself amongst the 'haterators' judging others or spreading gossip and rumors? How can you see the splinter in your neighbor's eye with a plank in your own eye?" asked Tigney.

"Discovering the element of good in our enemies will help us to love our enemies both globally

Graphic by Cheryl Jamieson

and locally."

That means everyone, whether you're African-American, Hispanic, Caucasian, Asian, Indian, male or female, Christian or Muslim, it doesn't matter because God loves the whole world, said Tigney.

"It is not enough to talk-the-talk, but you got to walk-the-walk. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was a man of action as well as a man of service," said Tigney. "He paid the ultimate price for believing that true peace is not the absence of tension but the presence of justice."

"Martin Luther King Day is a holiday for all people, inter-racial and inter-cultural," said Chaplain Tigney. "Only half-a-life time ago; Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. walked amongst us and shared his dream."

respect, discipline, teamwork, social awareness and physical conditioning. "The instructors teach these values by using military boot camp methods that have been slightly toned down. The program breaks the children down and then slowly builds them back up again," said Staff Sgt. Clarence Augurson, primary LBC instructor.

The D-M program began in January 1999. "I decided to start a program that would teach children mainly discipline and respect. I volunteered around Tucson helping children in different programs and saw that a lot of them had discipline problems and needed attention. We developed LBC to have a more direct effect and give children a sense of belonging and something challenging to do after school."

LBC is taught by all military instructors the rank of staff sergeant or below because the program doesn't want to provide parental figures to the children, said Augurson.

The camp is held from 4 to 6 p.m. every school-day except Wednesday. "Our typical day includes 40 minutes of classroom time and 75 minutes of outside time," said Augurson.

"We teach the core values, have guest speakers, teach respect and occasionally play games during classroom time. Outside, we teach facing movements, marching, teamwork and physical conditioning," said Augurson.

LBC culminates with a two-day sleepover, when the instructors take the children on a team-building activity such as bowling or skating.

The activities vary with each class. The main goals of the program are to teach children to show some self-respect and respect for others. "We want them to be role models for their peers," said Augurson.

Approximately half of the trainees are voluntarily enrolled and some repeat the class to receive further benefits and discipline, said Augurson.

For the other half of the students, enrollment is mandatory. Either parents or teachers can enroll a child if they feel it is needed, Augurson added.

"The kids gain a great sense of discipline. On average, 85 percent of students bring up all their grades by at least one letter. They also feel like they belong to something. The volunteers make themselves available as mentors even when the program is not in session. That way we keep up with kids that do not progress as well as others in the four weeks."

Typically eight to nine four-week classes are held each year. Eight classes are scheduled for 2003. LBC was held at six middle schools in the Tucson area in the past and is continuously expanding. Class sizes are generally about 30 to 35 children and 250 to 270 children graduate the class each year.

Enlist

The total active-duty commitment would be about 19 months. This short-term option is for initial entry into service, not for accessions, those who have left the service and want to rejoin.

The Army and Navy already have a limited two-year enlistment program, this is the first time the Air Force and Marine Corps will offer the option. Traditional enlistment terms for the Air Force have been three, four, five and six years.

"I would never ask someone, 'how many years are you serving,'" said McFarlane. "I don't care if it is four or six years, they are serving our country. I don't think co-workers would think of them any differently than just another guy who shows up to work."

Following successful completion of active duty, servicemembers may re-enlist for further active duty or transfer to the selected Reserve for a 24-month obligation. They can also stay in the selected Reserve or transfer to individual ready Reserve for the remainder of an eight-year commitment.

"The unique piece of this legislation is that while in the individual ready Reserve, these young people will be given the opportunity to move into one of the other national service programs, such as AmeriCorps or the Peace Corps, and time in those will count toward their eight-year obligation," Clark said.

According to McFarlane, there may be a challenge retaining those members who choose the short-term option. However, goals for recruiting were met the past year and continue to be met, so the issue is the person serving, not the number of people who choose to serve.

"The Air Force will impact a servicemember's life in some way and make them a better citizen," said McFarlane. "Retention challenges are just a small price to pay for all the benefits of allowing someone to serve who may never have been reached in any other way."

Clark said that the option would be limited to high-quality recruits — those with a high school diploma and scores in the top half of aptitude tests. Officials hope this will make the military more attractive to college-bound youth who might volunteer to take a short period out between high school and college, but would not take off that three- or four-year period.

He said he feels the option may also attract college graduates interested in serving their country before attending graduate school. But perhaps the largest potential pool for the option is with community college graduates who might serve the country for a short time and use available incentives to enter a four-year school, Clark said.

Proposed incentives include a $5,000 bonus, payable upon completion of active-duty service; 12 months of a full Montgomery G.I. Bill stipend; 36 monthly payments at one-half of the current Montgomery G.I. Bill stipend; and loan-repayment paid at the end of the active duty. Legislation allows for repayment of up to $18,000 of qualifying student loans.

"This should attract college graduates looking to go to grad school," Clark said.

By the new fiscal year, services will set criteria concerning who will be eligible for enlistment and what jobs they can apply for.

Military specialties that involve long-term training will not be offered. Basic medical specialties; some engineer skills; and personnel, administration and combat specialties will be part of the mix.

The first people who opt for this program will go into the delayed-entry program beginning Oct. 1.

Clark was adamant that servicemembers in this program would not be "second-class citizens."

He said although they will serve shorter periods of time, they would be treated the same way as those with longer-term enlistments.

It's not a great idea, but if that's what the boss wants . . .

By Lt. Col. Bradley Byrd
41st Electronic Combat Squadron

"Yep, I personally think it's stupid, but the commander says we have to, so that's what we are going to do."

Have you ever heard something like that from your supervisor? Unfortunately, you probably have, maybe a few times.

Your supervisor (call this one Capt. Quibble) may even think he is being a good team player by sharing his thoughts. Maybe he thinks he knows better than the boss. Maybe it is a way to enhance their self-image, as having an input—a good input—that was overlooked.

Well, how did it come across to you? Were you motivated, ready to jump in and support the plan with your full backing? Not likely. The underlying principle here really is loyalty. When a commander wants something done his staff usually has a chance to make inputs. You will usually have a chance to express your viewpoint if you disagree.

Ideally, you will present your objection and an alternate course of action, in private, before the decision is made public. However, when the commander makes the decision, your job changes. Your objections at this point are now out of the "constructive criticism" category, and show a lack of loyalty.

So, what is the impact of a statement like this? Hypothesize that we're sitting at the home-drome and the commander says, "All personnel have to sign off their mobility folders every month instead of every six months." Capt. Quibble passes this information on with the added comments of, "That's the stupidest idea I ever heard, but he's the commander, so let's get it done."

Damage report? The biggest impact is the erosion of everyone's estimate of the commander. People begin to think that maybe he is kind of block-headed, like Capt. Quibble said. After all, you see Capt. Quibble on a daily basis — you know he's sharp. You don't cross paths with the commander all that often. The criticism can spread rapidly. Everyone likes a little controversy. Secondary effects, you probably will not get the best compliance, since after all, it's been acknowledged as a stupid idea. It would be pretty easy to justify "pencil whipping" the requirement in light of the lack of support the middle management gives it.

Now, hypothesize yourself in a forward operating location. You might be talking about life and death, literally. This is not a good time to second-guess the commander. There just might not be time to solicit opinions and make the staff-approved, politically correct and culturally sensitive directives that you are accustomed to in peace-time.

When the commander says jump, you better jump as if your life depended on it.

What is Capt. Quibble doing? Still motivating the same old way: "The boss says we have to inspect gas masks every day, another example of 'making work' for us to keep us busy — well, at least go through the motions."

Did the commander have to share the intelligence that a chemical attack is expected in order to keep his troops safe? With a loyal supervisor working for him, he wouldn't need to worry. With someone who second-guesses every move, like Capt. Quibble, it's going to take a lot more work.

Loyalty is inherent in the military. Anyone will tell you they are loyal, even Capt. Quibble. After all, he does support the commander, he does tell the troops they have to do what the boss wants. It's really a matter of loyalty. Giving lip service versus making the commander's wishes your own and getting 100 percent behind his policy. There is a big difference in following orders to the letter and being completely loyal.

“ If orders are taken lightly or belittled during routine operations, the same will occur during combat. We can't expect to receive the loyalty vaccine when processing through the mobility line.

— Lt. Col. Bradley Byrd

Sadly, while the lack of loyalty seems to breed and multiply like a virus, loyalty itself does not. It takes a constant, conscious effort. You might have gone into the boss's office to voice your concerns with a new directive. You've been asked for your opinion; you have given it, and then been over-ruled.

When you come out of the boss' office, you might need to take a deep breath. The idea you opposed a few seconds ago is now your idea. It's your job to instill it in the people that you supervise. When they second-guess or express objections, it's your responsibility to defend and promote, not sympathize.

We've all heard the wise advice to "train as you would fight." In fact, we fight as we train, too. If orders are taken lightly and belittled during routine operations, the same will occur during combat. We can't expect to receive the loyalty vaccine when processing through the mobility line. It is not always easy. It takes conscious thought, every day.

Every day across America hungry boys and girls are scrambling just to survive!!!

Services Squadron offers award winning support, still improving processes

By Staff Sgt. Shanda De Anda
355th Wing Public Affairs

The Davis-Monthan Air Force Base 355th Services Squadron, which has already earned Air Combat Command's Food Excellence Award, is currently being evaluated as one of the top facilities in the Air Force. The competition for the John Hennessy trophy, an annual award presented to the installation having the best food service program in the Air Force, is a challenge that requires efforts of the entire team.

"The support we get from the wing is incredible. Our wing commander, vice commander, command chief master sergeant, mission support group commander and all other commanders, shirts and chiefs support our facilities 100 percent," said Maj. Rob Hurst, 355th SVS commander. "They just don't provide lip service, they come and eat with our troops, serve at the monthly birthday meals, prep food with our TCH (Tempe Center for Habilitation) contractors, and, most importantly, they recognize our efforts as invalable to our Air Force mission."

Services members have proved their award-winning capabilities, but they continue to seek ways to make improvements and better serve the D-M community.

"The 355th Services Squadron is about taking care of troops and families. It's that simple. We continuously provide top-notch programs coupled with superior customer service," said Hurst. "The D-M community supports us every day and we love to show our appreciation via our programs and activities, but most important is our great people and their award-winning attitude."

"The men and women of the Desert Inn Dining Facility and the Roadrunner Flight Kitchen are the most dedicated crew I've ever seen. They have a can-do attitude that is unparalleled and provide the absolute best products to our troops and families," said Hurst.

Services facilities base-wide, including the dining facility, bowling center, Eagle's Nest, Stormy's Café, Cabana's and Roadrunner Expanded Flight Kitchen, review menu items regularly and make changes based on customers' requests and nutritional value.

"The expansion of our Grab N' Go selections over the last year has really had an impact on customer satisfaction. Customers short on time frequently rush out to fast food restaurants and make unhealthy choices," said 2nd. Lt. Matthew Mountcastle, 355th SVS food service officer. "If we can attract them with our nutritious Grab N' Go selections, we can bring in more customer conveniences and increase mission performance at the same time."

"Our customers will see the addition of a new salad bar. Arriving in early February, this salad bar will include a hot bar for our vegetarians and a pasta bar."

Also, as the operations tempo of D-M, which is usually high, picks up pace, the services squadron keeps the needs of family members in mind with several programs. The program with possibly the most impact to the D-M community is the deployed family dinner. The dinner is every Tuesday and helps to ease stress, said Mountcastle.

"In our squadron it always comes back to troops and families...if we don't maintain this superior service, we've lost the battle," said Hurst. "Our food service crew, made up of military and civilian contractors make every effort to ensure we stay on top...it's their commitment to excellence that sets them apart."

"We're so proud of the entire squadron who helped out on weekends, days off and holidays. This was a total squadron and total wing effort," said Hurst. "It's no longer a question of 'Are we the best?' We just have to go out there and show it."

Chapel meets guest speaker challenge for National Prayer Luncheon

By Staff Sgt. Shanda De Anda
355th Wing Public Affairs

Davis-Monthan Air Force Base will host the annual Prayer Luncheon Thursday and the challenge of finding an event speaker was a welcomed one for Chaplain (Capt.) John VanderKaay, National Prayer Luncheon coordinator, and Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Scott Gardner, 355th Wing senior chaplain.

D-M's luncheon mirrors the U.S. Senate and House prayer group sponsored breakfasts, which are endorsed by the president, and the speaker needs to reflect this and the president's sentiments on the power of prayer, said VanderKaay.

This year's guest speaker will be retired Maj. Gen. James Gardner Jr., former Military Airlift Command Headquarters chief of staff and Chaplain Gardner's father.

Gen. Gardner's active-duty career, from 1951 to 1983, took him to various assignments and afforded him valuable experience in command positions. The general, a command pilot with more than 7,000 hours, was stationed at such bases as Bien Hoa Air Base, Republic of Vietnam; and Kimpo Air Base, South Korea; uses his experiences and the importance of religion to himself and his troops to deliver a powerful message.

Chaplain Gardner suggested his father as this year's speaker because he is a dynamic person that has answered the call as Prayer Luncheon speaker several times in the past.

"My father is also my mentor," said Chaplain Gardner. "This is a great opportunity to share my dad with D-M as he shares how his faith was important to him in his Air Force experience."

"Chaplains are great speakers. We have had our command chaplain and chief of chaplains speak in the past, but a different point of view can reach more people," said Gardner. "Some of the best I have seen, besides the one we have selected this year, were Sammy Davis Jr., who was very active in his Jewish faith when he was asked to speak at a base in Hawaii and other celebrities, including professional athletes."

The purpose of the National Prayer breakfast/luncheon is to bring together the leadership of the United States in recognition of the moral and religious values upon which our nation was founded.

This year's celebration also unites a father and son in their shared faith and a combined 50 years of active-duty service to our nation as they share with the D-M community.

"Prayer for others is a generous act. It sweeps away bitterness and heals old wounds. Prayer leads to greater humility and a more grateful spirit. It strengthens our commitment to things that last and that matter. It deepens our love for one another," said President Bush during his 2002 National Day of Prayer commemorative speech.

"Prayer also deepens faith reminding us of great truths. Evil and suffering are only for a time; love and hope endure. Even in the world's most bitter conflicts, prayer reminds us of God's love and grace, ... , the hope He provides and the peace He promises."
